

Enjoying Cuban cigars at Dinner

Cuban cigars are perfect on their own and I'm sure you will agree and agree with one hundred percent compliance. Any day of the week (At least the people I know). would love to just chill at the beach with a nice Cohiba Robusto lit to it's full potential.

Smoking Cuban cigars after a meal wasn't always in fashion. The gentleman who discovered this great pleasure though needs to given the Nobel prize for helping the rest of the world discover the pure joy of smoking a Cuban cigar. Now what you have to decide is where are you eating? Is it a picnic or is it a dinner for two with that special lady in the red dress?

So it all depends on what kind of meal you are having. If you are having strong food that is rich in taste such as Thai or Indian food, than you need a nice light to medium cigar such as the Montecristo No 4. I personally don't like Montecristo but you have to understand, my second cigar after the Fonseca was a Partagas and Cohiba Robusto.

Smoking a cigar while your are munching out on your delicious food is simply disgusting. You are not only missing out on how delicious your food is but also your very own Cuban cigar. Everything has a time and place and so does smoking your Cuban cigar. Always either smoke your Cuban cigar before your meal or after.

If I smoke before, it must be accompanied with a nice drink. Scotch totally works in this scenario and you can even have some light wine. Moet is a very good choice as it's light and goes very well with a medium to light cigar.

Cigar dinners are actually now becoming very popular. It is unfortunate that in the United States of America, Cuban cigars are not sold (At least legally). As Cuban cigars after a nice dinner with friends and family can complete an already stellar night.
